Next Saturday, May 30th, is one of San Francisco's newest annual biking traditions: the Bikes to Books ride. Organized by local lovers of biking and literature, Bikes to Books is a 3-hour, 7.1-mile tour of the twelve San Francisco streets that in 1998 were renamed in honor of local authors and other artists. The ride begins at 1:00 pm sharp at Jack London Street on South Park.

I rode along on last year's inaugural tour, and I can say from experience the ride is great fun. Nicole Gluckstern, who led last year's tour, is a wonderful tour guide: sharing her knowledge of all twelve writers and their connections to the neighborhoods where their streets are and ensuring that none of the riders get left behind in downtown's dense network of alleys.
